Tumult & Shouting

Last week these intellects shed this light on world affairs:

"I would give a good deal if I could know as much about the Soviet Union as the Soviet Union can learn about us by merely reading the press."

ALLEN DULLES, director of the Central Intelligence Agency

"Lions still sell, but they have to be pretty rare to bring a fat price. What I wouldn't give to run across a dinosaur. I could peddle him in ten minutes and retire for life."

HENRY TREFFLICH, wholesale wild animal dealer

"The only way to get Americans to eat up much of the surplus food in this country is to popularize obesity."

REPRESENTATIVE KARL KING (Rep-Pa.)

"If there is a depression in the near future, it will be worse than the one in the Thirties for white-collar workers, if for no other reason than the rapid mechanization of office work."

C. WRIGHT MILLS, Assistant Professor of Sociology at Columbia University.

"The golden age of music is dead . . . The vocalists on records today couldn't have sung with (former) great bands. They're just freaks."

PETER POTTER, Hollywood disc jockey

"Food, wonderful food . . . You can really go to work on the American diet. No wonder the Americans churn out the goods."

FREDERICK ELLIS, financial editor of the London Daily Express
